Basically, childhood is generally accepted as a “natural” and “unchanging” stage in life. However, historical studies have proven to us that the meanings and experiences of childhood are constructed in different cultural contexts around the world. Hence, this course explores how culture, history, memory, class, gender, religion, food and geographic location have created unequal access to the shaping of childhood in diverse historical contexts. ■主要授課語言： 英語(English)
